

The Ogundipe Family

Kenny Ogundipe has a busy and full life. Originally from Nigeria, she came to the Atlanta area more than ten years ago. She has three beautiful daughters; Adedoyin, Adeola, and Adedamola. The two oldest girls are now young women, pursuing college degrees and working. Adedoyin is a certified nursing assistant and medical technician pursuing her nursing degree. Adeola is a fashion designer and is attending college for a degree in Computer Science.

Her youngest daughter, Adedamola attends Marietta High School with plans to graduate in 2021.

Kenny started working as a Certified Nursing Assistant several years ago. She loves caring for people with health challenges. To supplement her income, she began working for a manufacturer of medical kits two years ago, but still maintains part-time hours working as a CNA to fulfill her passion. Kenny learned of Habitat for Humanity-North Central Georgia through a coworker. Her colleague recently purchased an affordable Habitat home of her own in Woodstock. Kenny felt this might be the answer to her family's struggle to find more affordable housing, so she applied. She feels blessed to have been accepted into the program, and is excited about working alongside volunteers to build her and the girls' forever home.

We build strength, stability, and self-reliance through shelter.
